"The Ivoryton Playgoer"

RICHARD ARLEN first became a star when he was seen as the young aviator in one of the all-time great aviation pictures, "Wings." Since that time Mr. Arlen has starred in over two hundred and fifty pictures. "Four Feathers," "The Virginian" with Gary Cooper, "Come on Marines" with Ann Sheridan ring bells as being among the more popular movies of all time and are only three of Mr. Arlen's hits. He has co-starred with most of the great stars in the films; you see, he is one of the real Hollywood aristocrats who can claim the distinction of over twenty years star status. Mr. and Mrs. Arlen's plans are to spend another vacation here in Connecticut after he has finished his summer appearances, as this has always been a favorite spot for them. As a matter of fact, Mr. Arlen told us that they are looking for a place here; so, the Arlens like our state and they would be fine people to have around. Certainly the welcome mat is always out here at the Playhouse for a swell guy and a fine actor like Dick Arlen.

LEONA MARICLE was born in Texas but not on a ranch or near an oil well. So, you see, Miss Maricle is no usual young lady. Her whole career has been something a little special. Her first Broadway play was a hit. ("The Trial of Mary Dugan") and she received personal notices that established her then and there as a bright young actress. Since then she has appeared in a succession of hits: "Once in a Lifetime," "The Sex Fable," "The Dark Tower" — to mention only a few of them. Of course the films came after Miss Maricle, and she has appeared to advantage in over a dozen of them. Recently in "My Reputation," "Johnny Eager" and "Without Reservations."

When you have played opposite Greta Garbo, Marlene Dietrich, Constance Bennett, Barbara Stanwick, Joan Fontaine and Ingrid Bergman, you have earned for yourself a very enviable reputation. GAVIN GORDON has done just that. When asked what he had done in the films, he very casually started to mention the films and the stars and we found ourselves with the above list. (See you next week. —A. L.)
